If it is suspected that a business is not paying its fair share of the city tax, the mayor or his authorized to enter any business and examine its financial books, Nolan said.

If that fails to resolve the question whether the city is paying its fair tax, the city can hire an outside auditor to come in and audit the books of that business, and custide auditor to come in and audit the books of that business, he noted, that method. "I would think it would be advisable to have such an auditor," Nolan said.

Osgood's style sings

By DON FREEMAN

HOLLYWOOD said Charles Osgood, CBS put out a big promotional ad with pictures of people like Walter Cronkite pantionie Wallaco and Roger Mudd and Dan Rather, all of em - and me: There I was. picture right there with all the network big guns - and I was the only one on the list I never heard of."

This was at lunch not long ago and Charlie Osgood has obviously grown in stature. Certainly he's busy enough. He does CBS radio reports and an occasional end-piece on Dan Rather's newscasts and, this summer, he has been engaged as a reporter "Walter Cronkite's Unian excellent series devoted to scientific inquiry.

In this last-mentioned show, Osgood has acquired an education.

"I've learned why babies learn to smile right away, he says, "and all about how earthquakes are predicted. And in Japan I learned that it is a custom never to express displeasure if you are in the presence of a superior student, for instance, doesn't ever grimace in front of his teacher. And I restoring the art of Leonar-do da Vinci to something resembling its original form.

There is this about Charles Osgood — he speaks with 'a distinctive manner. You would know his voice anywhere. It is a voice and a is unstylized. There is a musical term that might apply dynamics, which refers to the shadings, the colorations of sound, the gradations between soft and loud. Osgood when he talks, has dynamics.

It is no surprise, therefore, that music has always been a significant part of his life. In the service, he was the announcer for the Army Band in Washington, D.C. For a time, he was a classical disc jockey at a Washington sta-tion. He also supervised the program schedules

"It gave me a feeling of power Osgood says in de-ciding whether to play Mozart or Bach"

He is the father of three kids — ages 6, 5 and 3.5 — he says that all of them are now studying the violin in the Suzuki method. He might take it up himself.

The sound of the human voice intrigues him.

"My bent is toward music, yes, and I like the way words sound, the way they flow, the rhythm of words. Some people tend to talk in one with no variety, no intona; tion, and they wonder why they don't sound very inter-

"The fact is, although news people would deny that it exists, there's a perform ing side to this business. We are performers. We have to sound good. At least, we should try to sound good.

"A newscast has to breathe," Osgood says. "You have to learn how to insert the right pauses - in musical terms how to be tacit, how to use rests - so that the rhythm is correct. Just went to Paris for a piece on blurting out the word is not only unmusical, it's uncommunicative."

Osgood said: "One thinks of Walter Cronkite, the way he sounds. He sounds great and he has sounded great for years but maybe he didn't have that sound when he started. Imagine Walter manner without artifice. It doing sports on the radio in Houston in his teens and somebody saying to him, 'Walter, you better stick to print. You just don't have the Osgood grew up mainly in Baltimore - if you request it, he can give you an earnumbingly accurate exam-ple of the "Ball-mer, Mareaccent. At Fordham University, he took a degree in economics, his academic career being unsullied by any courses in journalism or broadcasting. He entered the business as an executive. Only later did he turn to the microphone. Osgood says. "I was the general manager of a station before I had ever written anything other than a business letter. And from the youngest general manager around, I became one of the oldest cub reporters."

One of Charlie Osgood's distinctions is his ability to versify on the air. There are those who see in an Osgood verse the echoes of Ogden Nash and Dorothy Parker with some of the rhythmic bursts of Kipling and Robert Service and Grantland Rice and Damon Runyon. Osgood says his most recent and unubtedly his strongest influence was Dr. Seuss.

In fact, a collection of Os good's pieces, largely in rhyme, came out two years ago under the title: "Nothing Could Be Finer Than a Crisis That Is Minor in the Morn

Now, with his first work in its third printing, Osgood has another book forthcoming. This one has an Osgoodian title, to wit: "There's Nothing I Wouldn't Do If You Would Be My POSSLQ," is the title, and he explains those initials: "The Census Bureau invented this bit of jargon. POSSLQ - it refers to Persons of Opposite Sex Sharing Living Quarters."

Chicago scamp makes good in TV

By NANCY ANDERSON

HOLLYWOOD - If some one had predicted a bright future for adolescent Larry Manetti, the prophet might have wound up under a net.

For no sensible person could have realistically pre dicted that the Peck's Bad Boy of Chicago would amount to hill-o'-beans. much less that he'd become a well-behaved star of a popular television show, "Magnum P.I."

"I'm still mischievous," says Larry, the occasionally mischievous Rick of the Hawaii-based CBS series.

As a kid, he was a disinterested student who quit wise blessing.

When Larry told his father, a former Air Force pilot, that he wanted to leave off studying (not that he'd been doing much) and go to work, the elder Manet-ti said, "I think that's what you should do. I'll get you a iob.

Whereupon, Larry recalls, the father got the son a job driving and loading trucks, an occupation young Manetti found much less congenial than going to school.

"I found out about the real world," he says. "So I went. back to school at the YMCA and finished high school ahead of the class I would have been in if I hadn't dropped out.

After that, he tried col-leges here and there including Northwestern where he took a brief course in drama. Northwestern has a very prestigious drama depart-list of distinguished alumni. "I saw this of so, when he went to Hollywood and recited facts for his first official biography, Larry mentioned that he'd attended that famous school.

"I'd walked across the campus," he jokes. "No, I did take a course there. But I don't know why I put it in my biography that I'd gone to Northwestern.

"Anyway, I was at a party one night, and Charlton Heston came up to me and said. I believe we have something in common.'

Well, I knew it wasn't our . Larry's role in "Magnum' height, so I asked, 'What's that?"

""We both went to Northwestern, he said "I tell you, I wanted to throw up.

Larry's reference to height proves his self-confidence, for few actors, less than tall, will call attention to their stature unless they are comparing themselves with Alan Ladd

But Manetti talks freely about his proportions as compared with those of Tom Selleck who he greatly admires.

"It's hard to work looking up toward the ceiling," Larry says, "and some tall" actors won't do a thing to make it easier for you. But Tom goes out of his way to keep me from having to look up at him.

"He'll put his arm across my shoulder so that, in effect, he's leaning over a little. Or he'll play a scene sitting down. When we walk, I take the high ground.

Manetti and Selleck met playing guest roles on "The
